CALCULATING CONTAINER SHIPPING TIME

When ordering from China, it is important to plan ahead. This is especially true when sending products by sea freight. To make things a bit easier, we have compiled a list below. This list indicates sailing times for port to port shipping. Included in this compilation are most major ports, such as Hong Kong and Shanghai.

For other ports of discharge, not mentioned above, or for other ports of loading, please click here for a calculator. Do send us a comment and we will add your ports to this list.

Note also that the Freight times do not take into account further delays which may occur such as:

- Getting products to port a few days before sailing for clearance in China. Account for 2-3 days extra
- Waiting until the next available vessel departs (there is unlikely to be a departure every day to your port of choice)
- Customs clearance in your country (count 3-5 days of slack.)
- Internal trucking in your country. (count 3-5 days of slack.)
